Volcano costs climb to $3 billion

Senator A.L. (Slim) Rasmussen (D-29th Dist.) said recently, loss estimates in the state from the Mt. St. Helens volcano disaster are heading toward the $3 billion level.

The chairman of the Senate Government Committee said estimates of all kinds of losses in the state from property damage to farm crops and public facilities were presented to the Senate Friday (May 30) by state agency heads.

"These amounts totaled some $2.6 billion at that time and figures are going up each day toward the $3 billion level," Senator Rasmussen said.

He said local and county governments are hard hit in costs of cleaning up the ashfall and in restoring public facilities such as sewage treatment plants.

"Some of our small communities and counties already are operating on interest-bearing warrants, as they have spent their public works and public safety budgets in the two weeks since Mt. St. Helens first erupted," Senator Rasmussen said.

He said many State Patrol, sheriff department and local police department vehicles have been destroyed by the ash dust, or badly damaged and are not in running order.

The Pierce County legislator said losses to agriculture in the state are in the hundred of millions of dollars and emergency livestock feeding programs have been established.

"Losses in alfalfa and hay crops are severe and this could effect the dairy industry on the west side of the state as feed supplies shorten," he said.

Senator Rasmussen said the Department of Natural Resources estimates that private timber losses are in the $460 million range, with state forest land losses in the $100 million category.

K.K.K. is E.O.E. in Arizona

Arizona Department of Economic Security head Bill Jamieson and other department officials were embarrassed when a local newspaper revealed Saturday that the Ku Klux Klan has used the state agency to recruit workers for a robe selling campaign. Jamieson said he will investigate his agency's decision to list the Klan as an "equal opportunity employer."

The local Klan official (who refused to be identified) said he contacted the agency in order to recruit seamstresses to make the robes on a rush basis. The Klan hired five workers, including "one minority lady" according to the newspaper.

A state official confirmed that the listing was in the department's job bank.

When asked if the Klan had assented to equal opportunity in this particular case, a Klan spokesman said "on a one-time basis, yes."

Department of Economic Security job services personnel asked the state attorney general whether it was legal to list the Klan in the job banks and were told the Klan could be listed as long as it agreed to be an equal opportunity employer, the Phoenix News-Sun said.

Smoke signals

The authorities don't know who did it. They don't know why. They couldn't even manage to get an interview with the primary witness. Yet the Associated Press insisted in its first post-shooting press releases that "the incident was not racially motivated."

What rot! Vernon Jordan, one of the world's most prominent civil rights activists is shot in the back with a hunting rifle while returning to his hotel in a small mid-western city at 2:00 a.m, accompanied by a white woman. This, following a spring that saw Blacks the targets of racist oriented attacts by armed Whites in California, Oklahoma, Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee and Washington State. This, following the Miami riots, the worst racial disturbance in over a decade.

These incidents are not just the handwriting on the wall, but 50 foot neon signs saying one thing. The Jordan shooting is the latest in a seemingly endless litany of racially motivated incidents that provide horrifyingly adequate evidence that Whites have a long way to go before racism is completely eradicated from the fabric of American life.

The involvement or non-involvement of Mrs. Coleman, Jordan's companion at the time of the shooting, has sparked some nasty but expected rumors and innuendos. The fact remains, that whether the assailant was personally or politically motivated, it is highly probable that his or her actions were precipitated by racist attitudes.

We understand the reluctance of the major media to openly acknowledge the racist overtones of this attack, especially after Miami. However, if hollering fire in a crowded theatre is dangerous; ignoring copious quantities of smoke can be even more deadly.

Questions and answers about hypertension

TRUE OR FALSE? A person with high blood pressure feels tense or is under pressure.

False. Hypertension is a medical term which means that the blood pressure is high. It does not mean the person is or feels tense, anxious or uptight, nor does it mean that the person is under pressure.

TRUE OR FALSE? I can tell if my blood pressure is high or if I have hypertension.

False. There is no reliable way by which a person can tell if his or her blood pressure is high. Feeling tense or anxious, having headaches, nosebleeds, or broken blood vessels on the surface of the eye, or feeling tired, are *not*symptons or warning signs of high blood pressure. Almost all people with high blood pressure, even seriously high blood pressure, have no warning signs.

How then can I tell if I have high blood pressure?

The only way to tell is to have your blood pressure checked. This can be done not only at your doctor's office but by numerous other sources including company dispensaries, public health services, some fire departments or paramedical groups and senior citizen's centers, to name only a few. It is usually possible for almost anyone who wishes to have a blood pressure check to have it done at no or relatively little cost.

If having high blood pressure doesn't make me feel bad, then why is it so important?

High blood pressure is one of the leading causes of cardiovascular disease. Even mildly high blood pressure will, without any warning, increase the chances of having a heart attack or a stroke by as much as 300%.

If I have high blood pressure, what can I do about it?

In almost all cases, high blood pressure can be controlled. In many cases, it can be controlled through management of weight and with proper diet and physical conditioning. In those cases where these measures do not lower the blood pressure acceptably, medication can help. There are a great many medications available to physicians and in almost all cases, selected ones can control the blood pressure effectively and with a minimum of side effects.

If I have high blood pressure, but it is then lowered by medications, diet or exercise, do my chances of having cardiovascular disease decrease?

Yes.

I had high blood pressure several years ago, but my doctor gave me medication and it became normal. My high blood pressure was therefore cured, and I no longer have to take the medicine. Is that true?

In some cases a person who was once on high blood pressure medications may find that he is able to stop them and maintain a normal blood pressure. However, this is usually because of changes in the diet, or loss of body weight, or improved physical conditioning in the interim. It is important to realize that blood pressure medications do not permanently cure hypertension. They only control it, and they work only so long as they are taken. Once a person has started on high blood pressure medication, he should never stop taking the medicine without his physician's approval and without continued blood pressure checks to be sure that the blood pressures remains normal.

If my parents have hypertension, am I more likely to develop hypertension myself?

Yes.

If I am Black, am I more likely to develop hypertension?

Yes.

My chances of hypertension are really pretty low, aren't they?

Not at all. One out of every six adult Americans has hypertension. Unfortunately, because there are no warning signals, many of these people do not know they have high blood pressure. A great many more people who have been told they have high blood pressure choose not to seek or continue treatment because it's hard for them to accept that they have a condition which requires treatment. After all, they feel perfectly well. Unfortunately this decision greatly increases their chances of being one of the over one million people who die each year of cardiovascular diseases.

Andrew Young says "happy birthday"

Former United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young lauds the volunteer agency VISTA on its 15th anniversary

There is a young woman in Atlanta I am very proud of. Not only because she is my daughter, but because Andrea Young is involved with a very special program--VISTA -- Volunteers in Service to America.

As a VISTA supervisor, Andrea works with four VISTA volunteers who are community organizers. She shares their optimism that people can make a good place better. And that what individuals do, makes a difference.

VISTA volunteers are creating images of the future. It is a future that is long on hope and short on resources except that most important resource -- people. The same kind of people have carried on the tradition and dedication of VISTA since the first volunteers in 1964 who said "I want to help." Since then, more than 70,000 Americans have stepped forward and said, "I want to do my part!" Right now, more than 4,000 VISTA volunteers are serving communities in hundreds of projects all over the United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Guam.

I have known and worked with many anti-poverty programs in and out of government, at home and abroad, over the years, but VISTA has a special meaning for me. VISTA volunteers help the poor to help themselves -- community self-help and citizen participation. Both fulfill the American ideals of neighbors helping neighbors and full participation in the democratic political process.

The poor, organizing themselves with the help of VISTA volunteers, know what needs to be done far better than distant government planners. VISTA volunteers, as advocates, translators of law into ordinary language, organizers and catalysts, show the way.

VISTA volunteers are special people. Yet they come from all ethnic and economic backgrounds. Some are senior citizens who refuse to retire from their communities and their neighborhoods. They refuse to retire from life. Others are young: just out of college. All of them share a deep commitment, they want to really use their knowledge and talent.

VISTA volunteers dedicate one year, sometimes two or more, to working in poor neighborhoods and rural communities across the country. They receive subsistence allowances that permit them to serve full time on anti-poverty projects, sponsored by community organizations which are usually grassroots, self-help groups.

Her are some examples:

- In Cabin Creek, Kentucky, a VISTA volunteer organized a handicrafts and quilting cooperative. The products made by the people in the cooperative are now sold to stores at a profit, bringing much-needed income to their isolated Applachian families.
- In New York City's South Bronx, VISTA volunteers provided technical help for a group of residents who renovated four abandoned tenements and, through "sweat equity" turned them into co-op homes for 28 low-income families.
- In southwest Georgia and in ten other southern states, VISTA volunteers sponsored by the Federation of Southern Cooperatives are helping organize small farmers and rural poor into farm co-ops and credit unions which pool their resources and give them muscle in the market place.
- In Los Angeles, VISTA volunteers are working with the Gray Law organization to provide legal services to low income elderly, and to organize a coalition of housing and tenants' groups to press for more adequate low-income and senior citizen housing.
- In Kansas City, Kansas, a VISTA volunteer is organizing a community to install insulation, weatherstripping and caulking to conserve energy in homes, and has built a solar collector to demonstrate that solar heat is something possible now.

Specific skills sometimes are needed for VISTA projects, but by-and large what is more important is commitment, flexibility, imagination and hard work.

I invite you to consider a year of VISTA service. This country needs dedicated men and women. We need your energies and talents applied where they can do the most good, dedicated to strategies

Phone company seeks cover art

The most widely read publication in Washington is seeking a photograph for its cover.

Pacific Northwest Bell, for the second year, is inviting Washington residents to submit entries for its telephone directory cover photo competition, according to PNB manager, Gary Bradley.

June 16 is the deadline for entering the contest which will provide the winner with $1500 in prize money and the honor of having his or her photo, with appropriate credit, appear on the cover of the company's directories to be published in Washington during 1980-1981. Winners will be announced August 22, 1980.

Entry forms, with complete explanations of how to enter and on what basis the photos will be judged, have been sent to PNB PhoneCenter Stores and commercial photo supply stores throughout Washington.

The competition is open to anyone who lives or works in PNB territory. This year the contest also is open to PNB employees.

PNB reminds entrants to send duplicates of entries, not originals, for initial judging. Twenty-five semifinalists will be chosen and original negatives or transparencies will be requested for the final screening process.

A three-judge panel of experts will choose from ten finalists following the screening process to eliminate photos not suitable for reproduction on directory covers because of technical considerations.

Outside... Looking In

Sheree Sparks, daughter of Allen & Day Wynn has been selected as an exchange student by Operation Crossroads of New York to go to West Africa. Sheree attents UW where she is working on her master's degree in ethnic musicology (music of all cultures). Sheree is the business manager of a female group called Quienyia which specializes in West African music--congrats--Sheree.

Safeway is on the ball--milk $1.73 per gallon--they are moving in the right direction--down!!

Black Collective meets every Saturday morning at Colored Women's Clubhouse, 23rd and Yakima-8:00 a.m.. Come out and participate in discussions--get in on the action.

The Tacoma Urban League's Annual Banquet is June 5th--Pavillion--6:00 p.m.--12.50 per person--Judge Jack E. Tanner is speaker.

Speaking of Judge Tanner, we certainly are being kept up to date on his court decisions--every word he utters finds its way into the media. Not that its not worth knowing, but; since when has the TNT been so interested in what judges say while sentencing? Not since Judge Boldt, have we known what federal judges were doing--and his was only on Fishing or Treaty Rights cases.

I said all of this to say I didn't like the editorial page comment on Judge Tanner's ruling in the Walla Walla case and the inference that he could not be objective. He can be more objective than most because he has seen both sides and can weigh the issues from a legal point of view. He can look at things in the round. Judge Tanner doesn't need my defense of his position or ruling, but I'll give it anyway.

Stopped in to check out the Bake and Plant Sale given by the Irene Gaines Improvement Club--talked with a few of their members--Irene Brown, Jean Grant, Jean Kennedy, Lillie Morris, Suzie Crawford, Thelma Glover, Clara Cox, Sarah Gordon, Ozetta Allen, and Janobea Wilson. These women were raising funds for scholarships. They have neat fund raisers all year long--support them next time you hear about their activities.

The NAACP will be holding its Annual Meeting in Miami--enough said!!

Went to John Spellman's Kingdome campaign fund raiser--must admit it was a good way to raise funds--sports folk and the Kingdome.

Traveling to Seattle for the Black Women's Caucus, Seattle Branch, fund raiser was: Carmen Queens, Hortense Refour, Hattie Crisp, Marie Keys, and yours truly--we had fun. Raising money doesn't have to be painful.

Rev. Alfred Davis will be receiving his Doctorate of Divinity Degree on June 15th at 3:00 p.m. at Eastside Community Center, 4420 Portland Ave.--congratulations Rev. Davis.

The attack on Vernon Jordan is another senseless attack on Black leadership--where is the outcry? Ted Kennedy went to see him so did Jimmy Carter--what does that prove--nothing, to me, except its election time. Think about it--God grant Vernon Jordan a full and complete recovery.

Rumor has it Paul Fletcher, son of Arthur, will run against Peggy Maxie for the State House of Representatives. That's the 37th District in Seattle. Paul is a republican--his dad ran for Lt. Governor a few years ago. I mention this because only two Blacks are in the State's legislature--George Fleming in the Senate and Peggy Maxie in the House--both from the 37th District.

He said the State Fisheries Department has abandoned its Toutle River Hatchery, valued at $4.9 million, and smaller hatcheries at two other locations, Beaver Slough Pond and Deer Springs Pond.

"An annual fish loss of $5.8 million in Coho, $5.7 million for fall Chinook and $305,000 in spring Chinook has been estimated by the department," Senator Rasmussen said, noting that these losses were from the hatchery program.

The loss in all species of hatchery-origin fish of all species is estimated at $3.1 million and native fish at $1.6 million, the State Government Committee chairman said.

Game and wildlife losses also are in the millions of dollars with eruption and ash resulting in the estimated loss of 19,700 big game animals and 1,468,500 birds and mammals.

Senator Rasmussen said 411,000 steelhead and cutthroat anadromous trout were killed by the eruption, with 26 lakes destroyed and 27 lakes significantly damaged.

"Game department wildlife agents estimate that 298 miles of resident and anadromous streams were destroyed, including 87 miles in the Toutle River system, 37 miles on the Green River and 20 miles in the lower Cowlitz River," he said.

In addition, the department reported that three boat launches and parking areas were destroyed, 9,327 linear feet of river fishing easements were inundataed with mud and debris, and 148 acres of department owned recreational lands were covered with mud. Some 24,000 square miles of wildlife habitat received ash fall causing direct loss of fish and wildlife or habitat, Senator Rasmussen said.

"Annie" to open new theatre

Following the overture played by members of the Seattle Symphony, conducted by Henry Holt, the Pacific Northwest Ballet officially brings up the new emerald green front curtain of The 5th Avenue Monday, June 16, leading off a unique 90-minute, non-stop program which showcases the performing arts in Seattle and launches a new era for the 1926 movie palace recently renovated at a cost of $2.6 million.

The theatre, renovated and operated by The 5th Avenue Theatre Association, opens its inaugural season of first-run Broadway productions Thursday, July 3 with a ten-week stand by the national company of "Annie."

Television celebrity Merv Griffin takes The 5th Avenue stage following the Ballet as Master of Cermonies for the unique program which continues with artists representing A Contemporary Theatre, the Seattle Opera, the Seattle Repertory Theatre, honored guest Helen Hayes, Reid Shelton and Ethel Merman.

The Ballet will perform George Balanchine's "Concerto Barocco," a master work of the twentieth century standard repertory.

Pantages Center begins money drive

Interior of the PANTAGES THEATRE, now known as the ROXY, as it appears today as a functioning movie house. Restoration and construction is scheduled to begin in early 1981 bringing the PANTAGES back to life as a live Theatrical Center.

The Pantages Center Board of Directors has announced the kick-off of a $1.5 million fund drive goal designed to match $1.5 million already committed to by the State of Washington Legislature. The fund drive began June 1, with a successful completion date set for November 1980.

Named as co-chairmen, of the fund drive effort, are Pantages Center Board members Archie McLean III and Bob King.

The Pantages Theatre opened in 1918, with the first of many successful attractions and events culminating in it's current use as the Roxy Movie Theatre.

Owned and operated as part of the very successful Alexander Pantages vaudeville circuit, the Pantages Theatre, during the height of vaudeville featured some of the most famous performers of their time. Among those who actually played in the Pantages Theatre, in Tacoma, Washington, included Fred Allen, Olsen and Johnson, Charlie Chaplin, W.C. Fields, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Bela Lugosi, Harry Blackstone the Magician, and Babe Ruth the star of the Yankees who actually hit baseballs into the audience from the stage.

In 1929 the Pantages changed hands and was purchased by the Radio/Keith/Orpheum Company who operated the theatre from 1929-1931 as a movie palace. In 1932, the Tacoma Pantages closed but reopened in 1933 as a motion picture house. The Pantages was rechristened the Roxy Theatre, its current name.

In 1975 the Pantages was listed on the Tacoma Register of Historic Places and the Washington State Register of Historic Places. As of 1976 the Pantages was listed in the National Registry of Historic Places. It was in 1976 that Richard McCann, A.I.A. of Seattle, was hired to do a remodeling feasibility study which would change the movie theatre back to it's original function as a live performance house.

By the end of the year, 1978, the Pantages Center Corporation, a non-profit group, was organized to arrange for the funding and operating of a restored Pantages Center for the Performing Arts.

In 1979 the existing buildings were purchased by the City of Tacoma for apporximately $450,000. Again in 1979 there was more good news for the revitalization and restoration of the Pantages Theatre when the State of Washington Legislature granted a $1.5 million match fund to be used by the Pantages Center Board and the City of Tacoma to restore and revitalize the historic structure.

Current plans call for the fund drive to be completed by fall of 1980. Constrution beginning no later than March 1981 with an anticipated spring 1982 opening. As a performing arts center the Pantages will play host to Broadway roadshows, all locally based arts organizations, including the existing symphony, opera and theatre companies, in addition to bringing in such special events as dance festivals and concert attractions.

D.T.H. offers the classic and the exotic to fans

The internationally renowned Dance Theatre of Harlem closes the 1979-80 Discover Dance Series with four evening performances June 4 (Wed.) through June 7 (Sat.) at 8:00 p.m. in the Seattle Center Opera House. Each night offers a program with a variety of classical and contemporary pieces.

Dance Theatre of Harlem is one of the first classical ballet companies in the world whose dancers, contributing artists, and choreographers are predominantly Black. Arthur Mitchell, the company's founder and former principal dancer with the New York City Ballet, has dedicated himself for the past decade to developing the dance talents of young people within his own Harlem community. From its beginning in an empty Harlem basement, Dance Theatre of Harlem has rapidly risen to international fame with such credits as two command performances for the Queen Mother of England.

The program for June 4 (Wed.) and June 7 (Sat.) includes SERENADE (1934), George Balanchine's first ballet created in the United States; GREENING (1975), choreographed by Glen Tetley with its recent American premiere in January 1980; ADAGIETTO NO. 5 (1975), Royston Maldoom's winning work of the 1975 International Choreographic Competition in Paris: and DOUGLA (1975), Geoffrey Holder's theatrical ensemble piece that combines Hindu and African themes.

June 5 (Thurs.) and June 6 (Fri.) the company performs THE FOUR TEMPERAMENTS (1946), a restaging of the Balanchine classic to a commissioned score by Paul Hindemith; MANIFESTATIONS (1975), a Garden of Eden pas de trois choreographed by Arthur Mitchell; MIRAGE (1970), Billy Wilson's work subtitled "The Games People Play;" and TROY GAME (1974), Robert North's rhythmical creation featuring the male company members.

Good seats are still available for all four Dance Theatre of Harlem evening performances. Volcanic ash causes household problems

Furniture, fabrics and floor coverings may be damaged by volcanic ash particles that are sharp-edged, according to Sonja Rue and Shirley Nilsson, University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service family living specialists.

The ash from the Mt. St. Helens volcano is different from ordinary house dust. Its sharp crystalline structure causes it to scratch surfaces when it is brushed for removal.

To clean household surfaces, the extension specialists said as much dust as possible should be removed with a vacuum cleaner. Then: --After vacuuming carpets and upholstery, you may want to use a detergent shampoo cleaner. Avoid excess rubbing action because the sharp ash particles may cut the textile fibers.

--Glass, porcelain enamel and acrylic surfaces may be scratched if wiped too vigorously. Use a detergent-soaked cloth or sponge and dab or blot rather than wipe.

--High-shine wood finishes will be dulled by the fine grit. Vacuum surfaces and then blot with a cloth treated to pick up dust. A tack cloth used by furniture.refinishers should work well.

Ash-coated fabrics should be rinsed under running water and then washed carefully. Remember:

--Soiled clothing will require extra detergent. Wash small for helping America's poor help themselves, committed to economic and social justice.

Besides what you can do for others, VISTA offers a learning experience to enrich your own life. One former VISTA volunteer in West Virginia put it this way: "I always felt that I wanted to do something socially useful. What VISTA did was to confirm that completely, and to open my eyes to things that, as a kid brought up in a middle-class environment, I had never seen before. VISTA was the critical experience of my life in terms of putting me on a certain track in what I felt I needed to do. There's no question in my mind that for 90 percent of the people who were down there when I was, VISTA changed their lives completely."

Call VISTA toll-free at 800-424-8580, if you're willing, in the words of a west Georgia farmer, poor himself, who volunteered for VISTA, "to help people grow out of poverty."

And join me in saying "Happy 15th Birthday, VISTA."

Tee & Turf Club news

By M. Giles

After a Super Weekend In Canada The Tee and Turfers played at Spanaway Golf Course under fair skies. Had a very good turnout. The Big Sticks for the day were Mr. Frank Snapp who shot a 75 for Low Gross and Mr. Bennie Allen who shot a 63 for Low Net.

The winners in the 1st Division Low Gross were J. Williams, 61 and L. Walls, 69. The winners in the 2nd Division Low Net were W. Davis, 87 and R. Cunningham, 71.

The winners in the photo are L to R: F. Snapp, L. Walls, R. Cunningham, and B. Allen. Standing alone is Mr. Wener Davis because of the eagle on no. 10 hole. Hang in there Bro Davis.

Next week we play at Tyee Golf Course at 10 a.m. See you on the 1st tee.
